Contractor Proposes Laser Rifles for US Military

Posted by michael on Wednesday April 02, @09:15AM from the han-solo-shoots-first dept.

The Fryar writes "Well, folks, it looks like the future really is now! It seems the Defense Review has uncovered a submission by Stavatti, a sort of "free market" defense contractor, to the military for a laser rifle. The submission comes in response to the Army's LFLAN requirement - the quest to provide "Light Fighter Lethality After Next" technology, or lasers/phasers/sabers/advanced weapons for use some 20 years down the road. Needless to say, I also considered the category "Star Wars Prequels" for this article."

Or you could use them to play a prank on a corrupt college professor - use the laser to fill his house wit

Oh.. wait..
